Why not take the time to try something new?

In the Spotlight “Lou Ann Nolan”

I recently had the honor of sitting under the trees on the Old Campus Courtyard for the graduation ceremonies of Yale University, watching my daughter graduate and listening to the Vice President of the nation give the commencement address. His granddaughter was one of the graduates. I was taken back at how this person was, at once, not the Vice President of our nation or a politician, but a proud and grateful father and grandfather. I watched as honorary degrees were bestowed upon a select few people in each of the fields and was humbled at their achievements to mankind. As I looked at each of these people, it was evident in all, that they were leaders who had been inspired by family and others to follow their dreams. Many of you are fathers, mothers, grandparents and family members. My thoughts for June are to encourage you all to inspire others, to support others, to tell your children and grandchildren to follow their dreams. For one day they may just be the grandfather or grandmother or father or mother that sits in wonderment and thankfulness watching their loved one graduate. I came from humble beginnings where new clothes meant new hand-me-downs from my cousin. I came from a world where my parents could not afford to send me to college or even buy me one book for collegiate studies. But the one thing I was rich in, was a belief that, if one wanted to do something badly enough and one was willing to work for it, one could accomplish anything. My great-grandmother taught me that. Life is what we make it. So remember the power you yield as grandparents, parents, and friends and the power of giving your loved ones belief in the possible and belief in themselves. You give them riches beyond gold.

“`The children had so much fun at the party! Thank you for giving them a wonderful memories and a fantastic time. All the pen pals were so generous and loving. Your program is amazing!” - Laura Rice, Red Bluff Elementary
